SDG 5 - Women's application in underrepresented subjects

KARE actively encourages women to apply for subjects in which they are traditionally underrepresented through outreach initiatives, and collaborations with other educational institutions, community groups, government agencies, and non-governmental organizations. Our institution employs a robust admission process, starting from identifying prospective female students, particularly those from underprivileged and rural backgrounds. A centralized dedicated admissions committee focuses on providing hassle-free access for female students, ensuring their equitable participation in various academic programs

KARE conducted several activities to Encourage applications by women in subjects such as Science, Engineering, Technology and Mathematics where they are underrepresented. Through university outreach activity of online lectures conducted as a regional campaign.
